If there is no way to do this then can anyone point me to a tutorial on how to accomplish this? I've been looking around for an answer and haven't found anything. A: You can have a single-row table with a property for a "page" number. Then the actual data can be split across multiple rows by setting that "page" property. Although this is similar to the way that MSSQL supports the Paging Data Through Stored Procedures, the way that you can do this is less constrained in NHibernate. In NHibernate, you can specify the hbm.xml mapping file, and if you feel that you don't want to hardcode the page number (i.e. you want it to be decided in the mapping) you can use a call to NHibernate's Session.BeginTransaction() method to do this in a single call. Reviewing the Intramedullary Nail for Treatment of Tibial Fractures and Associated Bone Loss. Despite remarkable advances in the treatment of tibial fractures, infections and nonunions remain a problem. Therefore, many studies have been performed to achieve the aim of optimal results. The literature review shows that the intramedullary nail represents the most widely used method of fixation. This review aims to provide an overview on the use of the intramedullary nail in the treatment of tibial fractures and also on the problem of nonunion.Q: image can not be displayed when request is made I'm trying to display a image from folder web_images/profile.jpg in my website.
